

FOCUS, SCOPE AND OBJECTIVES

The Revista General de Derecho Europeo (RGDE) is a scientific journal devoted to the study of European integration from a legal perspective. It is available on the legal portal www.iustel.com. It has been publishing academic contributions since May 2003.

The RGDE aims to contribute to and enrich the scientific debate on European Union law as a generator and driver of integration and a factor of economic and social progress. The RGDE welcomes contributions from different legal branches that carry out a rigorous and critical analysis of European Law, the European Union functioning and policies, and the consequences thereof for Member States legal orders.

Likewise, in order to comprehensively examine the European legal reality, it will also include articles and other contributions related to the normative and jurisprudential activity of the Council of Europe.

It is intended to be a useful tool for academics, doctoral students, and legal practitioners of national or European law.

To ensure the quality, timeliness and scientific interest of its published works, the Journal management has an Editorial Board, Scientific Advisory Board and Management Team composed of prestigious European legal scholars, with extensive and relevant experience, who provide ideas and topics to be addressed, as well as collaborate in the monitoring of each submitted manuscript, from its reception right through to final publication.

Any manuscript submitted to the RGDE is subjected to blind peer review, in order to guarantee its scientific quality and original nature.
